ISO 14001 Certificate Awarded to Jaga Heating Products

Jaga Heating's Environmental Efforts Acknowledged

05.20.2010 – Reinforcing its reputation as an environmentally-conscious company, Jaga, the European leader in stylish and safe energy-efficient radiators – has recently been awarded the ISO 14001 certificate. Currently less than 1% of UK businesses have achieved this prestigious award.

Jaga received the certificate from Quality Management Systems, who after a thorough review decided that the company's UK facilities complied with its stringent environmental standards. The ISO 14001 is an internationally recognized standard granted to companies that operate in an environmentally conscious manner, and further helps them comply with related laws, regulations and requirements. This certificate proves that Jaga's whole operations comply with environmental codes and align with its commitment to minimize its day-to-day ecological footprint.

When it comes to green heating, Jaga's products, such as its Low-H2O radiators have always led the way. Similarly Jaga's Dynamic Boost Effect (DBE) technology allows radiators to work effectively with heat pumps in sustainable, low temperature heating systems.

Phil Marris, Managing Director of Jaga Heating Products said, "Jaga is a company devoted to the environment and sustainability. With this philosophy in our hearts and by sticking to, or even exceeding, the demanding standards of certificates such as ISO 14001, we are continuously improving our environmental assurance and performance in all business activities to have the least impact on our world and minimise the burden we leave for future generations."
